The Grinch hated Christmas! The whole Christmas season!

And the more the Grinch thought of this Who-Christmas-Sing
The more the Grinch thought, "I must stop this whole thing!"

He loaded some bags and some old empty socks
On a ramshackle sleigh and he hitched up old Max.

Then he slithered and slunk, with a smile most unpleasant,
Around the whole room, and he took every present!

Every Who down in Who-ville, the tall and the small,
Was singing! Without any presents at all!

"Maybe Christmas," he thought, "doesn't come from a store.
"Maybe Christmas ... perhaps ... means a little bit more!"
